

María Elena Fernández Long

María Elena Fernández Long has a Magister of Science in Agricultural Meteorology, from the University of Buenos Aires in Argentina. She works at the School of Agronomy of the University of Buenos Aires. She has been working in changes in thermal availability for agricultural crops and in the frost regime. Her current project is: “Prognosis of grain production in the Pampas region by using different indices of climate variability”.