

Romina Mezher

Romina Mezher, graduated in Atmospheric Science from Buenos Aires University, is working in the Climate and Water Institute of the National Institute of Agricultural Technology in Buenos Aires, Argentina. Her research involves studying climate risks in agriculture such as hail, among others. One of the main objectives is to improve seasonal and medium range forecasts in order to take the best decisions in agriculture.