

Rafael Terra

Rafael Terra is currently Chair of the Department of Fluid Mechanics and Environmental Engineering (Universidad de la República –UdelaR -Uruguay). He combines a background as a Hydraulic Engineer (from UdelaR) with an expertise in climate science and numerical modeling of the atmosphere (PhD from University of California at Los Angeles). One of his main topics of interest is seasonal climate prediction and climate risk assessment, in particular applied to the water management sector.